

CUTLETS FROM CONTEMPORARIES

The Story of the Crusaders.

Celebrating an interesting anniversary On Friday, April 12th, an interesting anniversary was celebrated, for on that date, 700 years ago, the Crusaders began the siege of Constantinople—that town which some schoolboys and schoolgirls find it so difficult to spell—overran the city, and destroyed the noble works of Greek art which it possessed.

The Crusaders were brave and noble-hearted men, who, all those long years ago, "took the Cross"—to use the phrase of the period—to fight against the Saracens in the Holy Land, which through being conquered by Mohammed, had become part of the Saracenic Empire. Of that Empire Constantinople was the centre.

These brave and devout men were a large cross on the front of their outfit, and it was everybody knew that they had taken a vow to win back from the Turks the Holy Sepulchre where the body of Christ lay, so that Christian pilgrims might go there and worship free and unmolested. Many nobles and many knights pledged themselves in this way, and it was considered the duty of all true knights to "take the Cross" and to count it an honour to die in the cause.

Among the number was Richard, the holier to the throne of England, who afterwards became King Richard I., and because Richard I. and because Richard was not only the strongest knight but the most fearless fighter of his time he was given the name of Richard Coeur-de-Lion. Or Richard the Lion-Hearted.

This lion-hearted prince captured the fortress of Acre from the Turks, and more, full of zeal, upon Jerusalem to take it. But his army was hopelessly outnumbered, and when he came in sight of Jerusalem he realized that any attempt to take it must be in vain, he hid his face as one unworthy to look upon the Holy City that he could not rescue, and turned back again.

There were nine Crusaders in all, and of all the men who went to fight Richard Lion-Heart, whose whole mind was given to the enterprise, an enterprise which exactly suited his temperament, was the greatest renown for bravery and prowess in battle—English Cry.

"The eldest girl is at a place now," was the information a woman gave the blue-uniformed visitor some time ago, "lives in, doesn't touch the drink and never looks at a man." Torching Verses and Memories Hushed are those lips, their earthly song is ended: The singer sleeps at last, While I sit gazing at her arm, And think of days long past.

The room still echoes with the old-time music, As singing soft and low, Those grand, sweet hymns, the Christian's consolation, She rocks her to and fro.

A Secret of Success.

Do Your Duty and a Little More. Mr. Andrew Carnegie, in a recent address before a graduating class in New York, gave some excellent advice to the young men on how to attain success in life. Among other good things, he said: "There are several classes of young men. There are those who do not do all their duty; there are those who profess to do their duty; and there is a third class, far better than the other two, that do their duty and a little more."

"There are many great pianists; but Paderewski is at the head, because he does a little more than the others. There are hundreds of racemen; but it is those who go a few seconds faster or than the others that acquire renown. So it is in the sailing yachts. So it is the young and old men who do a little more than their duty who succeed. 'No one can cheat a young man out of success in life. You young men have begun well. Keep on. Don't bother about the future. Do your duty and a little more, and the future will take care of itself.'—The Warrior."

Billeting in Korea

"As good as a Pickle."

At first a Korean house was used for a time, until a suitable Hall could be procured. The search for it occupied a fortnight; then a man offered to rent to The Salvation Army two Korean rooms, built of mud and straw, each room measuring about 20 feet by 8 feet, one to be used as a hall and one as quarters. The offer was accepted. You comrades who revel in the delights of a comfortable quarters in England must try to think of cooking supper, eating (the same), and washing in straw wards, and preparing beds for two men—all in a single room 20

Don't Be Too Hard

On Yourself. An article entitled "Don't Be Too Hard on Yourself." The author says: "There is no doubt that in some cases it is good advice and really a man has been led to no good end, despising himself, can be forgiven and can be his back; and a new, cheerful path is open before him. Heaven, mortal desires, one's mistakes and follies wrong. Forgiveness and peace of mind are the promises of Gospel and are part of its 'good news' to mankind. 'I can forgive myself.' It is a mistake thing to feel or to say, no matter what has happened. Turned the other way, however, the advice is better by 'Don't Be Too Hard on Yourself.' It is counsel beyond criticism, and it applies much more widely to everyone who is too hard on self or herself than are a hundred who are too hard on their neighbours. Even those otherwise good Christians have this ugly fault of hardness of heart. Robert is a man who is very strongly when he said, 'The man who cannot forgive a mortal thing is a great burden to his Christian work.' After forgiving ten years ago, coming a Christian than he was at first cannot possibly be a better Christian. He is just the same, but both ways. This is the exchange."

But in the end, which the distressed showed him, he moved that there was still some good in his nature, the man wrote to his mother, 'Forget where I am, and let me as your boy just the same.' ## Staff-Capt. &amp; Mrs. Burrows

BRIEF LIFE SKETCHES OF OFFICERS WHO ARE LEAVING T. B. Q. FOR MONTREAL.

GOOD, all-round man is Staff-Captain Burrows, with practical experiences of many sides of Army work. He was saved when but a boy, and soon after began his work in The Salvation Army by acting as scribe at Territorial Headquarters. It was during a Holmes Meeting in his home town of Guelph that he first felt definitely called to Officership. As a Cadet he travelled with the Household Cavalry Band. That was over twenty years ago. He concluded his Cadet days by assisting the Officer at the Temple Corps, Toronto. Then he went as Lieutenant to several Corps in Ontario, carrying his Field experience by a short tour as assistant at a Prison-Gale Home in Hamilton. He then spent a short time serving behind the counter in the Trade Department. But he longed to be at the front again, and when the option was given him of choosing between an office position and a field appointment he eagerly accepted the latter. So he went as Captain to Camp-40. It was the first Corps he had had sole charge of, and he was anxious to make a success of it. The outlook at first was very discouraging, however. The few soldiers he found had got into a rut and were very pessimistic regarding the progress of The Army in that town. The new Captain surprised them. Their usual open-air stand was at a corner where rarely ever came to rest, to them. The Captain suggested that they should go to new place, where they could get at the people. They objected on the ground that they would all be arrested. The Captain thought otherwise, and failing to win the soldiers by direct interest, he got the ear of the crowd, interested them, and then invited them to a meeting in the hall. That night a record crowd attended The Army meeting, one soul knelt at the feet, and five held up their hands for prayer. Before the end of the year The Army marched out of Guelph. It was a lesson to Captain Burrows to go ahead on right lines, no matter what others might say or think.

His next appointment was as a travelling Revivalist. In company with several other Officers he visited the Corps in Eastern Ontario, and was instrumental in the conversion of numbers of souls. At Pembroke, his next Corps, he became famous as a lecturer on The Army's Social work. He got the town and the surrounding district interested, the papers wrote up accounts of his activities, and sufficient money was raised to wipe out a debt that threatened to cripple the Corps. Montreal I. was his next station. Here he started the Junior work and had such good success that he was just the man to appoint as Y.P. Secretary for the Province. In this capacity he hustled around from Corps to Corps organizing the Junior work. Then he went to Quebec, in charge of the Corps and Shelter, Barrs, Y.P. and Brockville were the other Corps he commanded, and then came an appointment to the Toronto Shelter and Wood yard.

By this time he had come in touch with a good many sides of The Army's multifarious operations, and all this experience was his for his next appointment, that of Financial Specialist. A man who has constantly called upon the rich to plead the cause of the poor must necessarily know what is being done by the poor. It is time being in command of Owen Sound Corps and District, the International Congress taking place at this time, he took the opportunity of visiting the base of The Army's birth. On his return he was transferred to the United States, and received the appointment of Financial Solicitor. This was followed by the Y. P. Secretaryship for the Ohio and Kentucky Province. Returning to Canada once more he was appointed to the Subscribers' Department at T. B. Q. He is now off to Montreal to act in the same capacity there. Just a few words now as to Mrs. Staff-Captain Burrows. She was formerly Captain Bowers, and her mother was one of the first Salvation Army soldiers in Toronto. Mother and daughter attended the Lisgar Street Corps, and on the latter's eighteenth birthday a long-looked-forward-to event took place, when Mrs. Bowers offered her daughter to the Lord as a Candidate. Her first Corps was Brims of a ministerial corps, and she went to British Columbia, where she did good work at several Corps. She is a devoted Salvationist, and a great help to her husband.

Staff-Capt. &amp; Mrs. White

WESTWARD FOR THE THIRD TIME.

His boyhood days the present Staff-Captain White spent in a great liking for poring over Bible stories, which inclined his parents to the opinion that he was destined to be a minister. Before he was out of his teens, however, the glamour of worldly success had so fascinated him that all thoughts of a ministerial career were put far from him, and taking the advice of a famous man, he made up his mind to "go West." On the banks of the Saskatchewan he sought for gold, but eventually found it more profitable to go shearing prairie chickens. At Edmonton he first met with the Salvation Army, and to show his practical sympathy with their cause he became a "subscriber" right away. All the birds he shot on Sundays he gave to The Army. Captain. He never thought he would get caught in the Army net, but he was, and in a rather sudden manner. An Officer came to stay at the boarding-house, where he resided, and one night she gathered all the boarders together and prayed for them. That prayer brought young White under deep conviction of sin. Next night he publicly went to The Army Pentecost-Farm. The call to Officership came simultaneously with his obtaining the blessing of a clean heart. His first Corps was Riverdale. After a few months here he was promoted Captain, and sent to Brampton. An appointment during this period he learned some of the choicest lessons of his life. Huntville was his next Corps. Here quite a revival occurred, and over forty-five soldiers were added to the roll. Sent a second time to Riverdale, he tackled his first building scheme, and erected a fine hall, which has since been considerably enlarged. At this Corps he was married to Captain Craig. They were sent out West, and in some of the larger corps towns in British Columbia and the States they carried on a splendid soul-saving work for several years. The Staff-Captain was then appointed to the Subscribers' Department at T. B. Q., in connection with which he has travelled extensively throughout the Territory, raising the "sweets of war" for various new Halls and Special Institutions. In Toronto alone, during a period of seven years, he has taken a prominent part in the raising of finances for us less than ten new Halls. These are as follows: No. 1, Corps, Dovercourt, Lisgar Street, West Toronto, East Toronto, Wychwood, Rhodes Avenue, Earlscourt, Yorkville, and the enlargement of Riverdale. In addition to this, the Staff-Captain has raised finances for the Rescue Home and Children's Home at Ottawa, the Rescue Homes at London, Halifax, Hamilton, and Vancouver, and the Melrose at Quebec. He has also had a share in financing the building schemes at North Bay, Galt, and Peterboro. So a good deal of work has been crowded into the seven years during which he has been a Financial Specialist. His face is now turned towards the West again, and with headquarters at Vancouver he will carry on campaigns, both spiritual and financial, for the benefit of the war on the Pacific slope and in the great Prairie Provinces.

British in the Antarctic.

AN ARTICLE SHOWING THE DIFFICULTIES OF EXPLORATION AND HOW THEY ARE BEING OVERCOME.

Some of the Men Who Are Now Spending a Second Winter in the Antarctic With Captain F. Scott, Who Stits at the End of the Table.

AN interesting narrative has recently been sent out to the world by Captain Scott, who is now wintering for the second time in the Antarctic regions. It covers all departments of the expedition's work—exploratory, geological, biological, magnetic, and so forth. One discovery that the explorers announced—namely, that of coal and gems—has brought home to the minds of practical business men the possibilities of polar research as nothing else could. It cannot be said that the expedition has been favoured with good luck in the matter of weather or general ice conditions. There is nothing in the nature of advance about the year's work which Captain Scott chronicles, but a study of Antarctic history shows how much weather can help or hinder the explorer. Blizzards have descended on the southern party at a time—near midsummer—when a decent-minded blizzard should be about, and the sea ice in McMurdo Sound has behaved in as awkward a manner as possible. An unexpected swell produced conditions which nearly had a fragile ending for the party returning from One Ton Camp.

As they were approaching a place called Hut Point, travelling over sea ice, they encountered working cracks and had to hastily retreat. At 2 o'clock in the morning they were obliged to camp in order to rest the tired ponies. At half-past four the men were awakened by a loud noise, and on investigating they found that the ice had broken up all around the camp and was moving with a heavy swell. One pony had disappeared from its picketing line and was never seen again. Hastily packing their sledges the party decided to try and work south-west over the pack, and with great difficulty they managed to drag the sledges along. The ponies had to jump from floe to floe. Thus they slowly made their way towards the great ice barrier, reaching it about noon. But their difficulties were only beginning, for they found the barrier unclimbable. They could neither advance nor retreat, and to remain where they were was to slowly perish for the swell was surging up the ice and dashing heavily ing slowly to the north-west, had now temporarily stopped. Letting down an alpine rope the men were hauled up the face of the barrier without much difficulty. But how to get the sledges and ponies up was the problem. By working hard all through the night they managed to haul the sledges and their loads, still they could do nothing for the poor ponies. At 4 a.m. the pack began to move again, and it was plain that desperate efforts must now be made if they wished to save the ponies. But the whole party were completely worn out with their exertions during the night and were forced to take a rest. Leaving the ponies with full nosebags on, they rested till 8 o'clock. By this time the pack was stationary again, and Capt. Scott decided on attempting the stupendous task of digging a trench through the lower part of the barrier edge. Two of the men clambered down on to the floating ice, and, taking many risks, led the animals over many jumps till they got them close to the barrier. The floes were high above the water and very uneven, and it was hard for men and ponies to get from one to the other in safety. The final jump was yet to be taken, however, the one that would land them in safety at the foot of the barrier, whence they could be hauled up the treacherous Great Glacier. Wholes now made their appearance between the floes, often blowing within a few yards of the party. An attempt was now made to get the ponies to jump the space between firm and loose ice. Three jumped short and were lost to sight in a few moments. The other won through just as the pack started moving again.

Captain Scott says that the swell which caused this disaster broke up more than ten miles of fast sea ice, as well as large fragments of the barrier and two miles of glacier tongue, a natural feature otherwise unchanged since 1002. Some idea of the tremendous power of the sea can be obtained from these simple facts. The expedition next set out to climb the Beardmore glacier on (Continued on page 15.)

SISTER MRS. WILSON OF SHELBURNE.

One of our oldest and most faithful life was founded in 1844. Sister Mrs. Wilson, has home. It is almost two years since our comrade had a meeting in the Hall, when a year was spent entirely in the but of late she was able to around, and hopes were raised for her recovery. On April 1st the home-calls were made, and our sister went to the sions above. It was the privilege to visit our comrade often, and she always found happy and with a firm trust in God. She always enjoyed cottage meetings held at home, and gave a bright money. At her own request gave her an Army funeral service at the home and were conducted by the commanding Officers.

FAREWELL TO LIPPINCOTT.

An Innovation in Corps Work. Sunday, the 14th April, was Staff-Captain and Mrs. Wilson forewelled for Vancouver, a memorable day for Lippincott. The Staff-Captain's "heartfelt talks" drew us nearer to God. Added interest was given to the afternoon and evening meetings by the presence of Mr. Lindsay, a friend of Staff-Captain's, and who is a faithful planter. His masterly handling of the instrument lighted us all. Intense earnestness characterized all that he said, and his will was during the day. There were public surrenders. It has been decided to hold Quarterly Soldiers' tea and song at Lippincott for the purpose of hearing reports of progress from the Local Officers in charge of the different branches of the Corps. At the first of these events, held on Easter Monday, Sergeant Bearcroft reported on the good open-air work done by the quarterlies. Staff-Captain Fraser (for the J. S. Sergeant) reported that spiritual progress was being made in the Juniors' Corps; the Treasurer spoke very approvingly of the way in which the soldiers reported the Corps financially. Subsequently, the Chief, Mr. Lippincott, presented a report on the work of the Band during the past year, and outlining the plan for the future. Several soldiers attended the tea, and agreed it was a great success.

EDITORIAL CHANGES.

The installation meetings of Commissioner Ogrim and Colonel Owen to the commands, respectively of Sweden and Norway, have been arranged to take place, the former on May 8th, and the latter on May 6th. Commissioner Ogrim, the Assistant Foreign Secretary, will represent International Headquarters, and will conduct the introductory meetings in Stockholm and Christiania. The changes in Scandinavia are now taking place are in the light they throw on the international spirit of the Army. Commissioner Ogrim, who is a Swede, will be officially supported, as hitherto by the Ogrim, who is of Danish nationality and whose help and assistance has contributed not a little to the great work the Commissioner has done in Norway. The wife of the governing Swedish Commander, Commissioner Mikkio, is of Danish nationality, but in London with the Commissioner she will have a hearty welcome, and will have opportunity to use all her strength and powers in helping forward the War.

made a good suggestion when she said that each one present should write on a post-card the sentence from The General's address which most impressed him or her and post it to her, when she would have a selection made from among the best cards, and the words quoted would be printed on a memento card which would be prepared for them. To say that the audience was highly delighted at this happy thought is to put it very mildly indeed. The General then spoke to them.

WOODSTOCK'S BAND OF LOVE.

"The Best That the East has produced." This big company of Juniors and Young People is in charge of Mrs. Adjutant Urquhart, who is a capable and hard-working leader. The children (says our correspondent, Band Secretary Nilsen) are all in love with Mrs. Urquhart, and show it by their splendid attendance at the meetings. The whole Junior work is in good standing. We have the very best young people to be found anywhere; they are clever and active, always on hand to assist the Corps with a demonstration or special programme of any kind. We should be badly off at Christmas-time without them. On a recent evening Mrs. Urquhart and her staff of workers arranged a tea for two members, forty-two of whom were present.

SOCIAL WORK IN HAMBURG.

In the City of Hamburg, Germany, the Army has four men's institutions and a Rescue Home. The former provide accommodation for 320 men, and the latter accommodates twenty-five girls. The men are employed principally in wood-chipping and paper-sorting, but are also often hired out.

WOODSTOCK'S BAND OF LOVE.

Captain and Mrs. Ebert are in charge of the Albertstrasse Elevator, where the paper-sorting is done. It is very evident that they regard their work with enthusiasm. The Home is certainly something to be proud of. There has been acute distress in the city during the winter, due chiefly to unemployment, but accentuated by exceptionally severe weather. Great numbers of people have, therefore, been provided with food and shelter by the Officers of the Men's Social (Continued on Page 15.)

WOODSTOCK'S BAND OF LOVE.

One of the "trophy" who gave his testimony was a Highlander who had been reclaimed from the depths of sin. He related how, through drink, he had lost one after the other, six promising positions of trust, including a town clerkship; how, in his despair, he had resolved on self-destruction, but was stayed in the act by the words, "Better to bear the ills we have, than fly to others we know not of"; and how, at last, he was led to the light and to manhood again by The Army.

WOODSTOCK'S BAND OF LOVE.

As regards Mrs. White, we might say that she is one with her husband in endeavouring to promote the interests of the Kingdom of God. When but a Junior she was converted at the Lister St. Corps. She became a Company Quartermaster, a Junior Sergeant, a Corps of God. When but a Junior she was converted at the Lister St. Corps. Begone, vain world! thou hast no charms for me,
My captive soul has long been

I listened long to thy vain song,
And thought thy music sweet,
And thus my soul
Lay grovelling at thy feet.

What are thy charms, could I command the whole
Thy mingled sweets could never

A nobler prize attracts mine eyes,
Where trees immortal grow,
A fruitful land
Where milk and honey flow.

My soul, through grace, on wings
of faith shall rise
Towards that dear place where my possession lies;
That sacred land, at God's right

Brothers lift your voices,
Loud your anthems raise.

Onward, then, ye people,
Join our happy throng,
